

Martin J. Durbin
Director, Federal Relations
American Chemistry Council/American Plastics Council

BIOGRAPHY

Since the merger of the American Chemistry Council (ACC) and the American Plastics Council (APC) in January 2002, Martin (Marty) Durbin has served as Director of Federal Relations for both national trade associations. In this capacity, he has responsibility for all federal legislative and regulatory matters of interest to the members of APC – the largest U.S. plastics resin manufacturers – and APC's associated business units. For ACC, he has responsibility for legislative matters related to transportation and security.

Prior to the merger, Mr. Durbin served as Director of Federal and International Affairs for APC. In addition to responsibility for federal legislative and regulatory matters, he also coordinated strategy and activities with counterpart organizations around the world.

Before joining APC, Mr. Durbin worked on Capitol Hill. As a legislative assistant for members in both the Senate as well as the House of Representatives, Mr. Durbin's primary responsibilities involved environment and energy related matters.

Mr. Durbin received a BA in Government and Politics from the University of Maryland College Park.
